

CONTENTS

| | |
|--|----|
| 1. Introduction | |
| 1.1 Introduction | 10 |
| 1.2 Conceptual framework | 12 |
| 1.3 Why Munich? | 15 |
| 1.4 Literature review | 18 |
| 1.5 Primary source material | 24 |
| 1.5.1 Further methodological considerations | 27 |
| 1.6 Chapter Outline | 31 |
| 2. Theoretical Framework | |
| 2.1 Consumption | 33 |
| 2.1.1 Emulation | 34 |
| 2.1.2 Hedonistic consumption | 36 |
| 2.1.3 The symbolic value of consumption | 37 |
| 2.2 Advertising | 38 |
| 2.2.1 Advertising as communication | 39 |
| 2.3 Gender | 41 |
| 2.3.1 Separate spheres | 42 |
| 2.3.2 Doing gender | 43 |
| 2.3.3 The intersecting processes of consumption and the construction of gender identity | 44 |
| 2.4 Consumption, culture and society | 45 |
| 3. The Consumer Society at the Turn of the Twentieth Century | |
| 3.1 Periodisation | 49 |
| 3.2 Buying and selling: shopping and advertising in early twentieth century Germany | 51 |
| 3.3 The department store | 53 |
| 3.4 Consumerism and the occupation of urban space | 57 |
| 3.5 The female consumer on the city street | 59 |
| 4. What Women Want: The Female Consumer in Advertising and Trade Journals | |
| 4.1 Advertising and trade journals | 61 |
| 4.2 Bringing across the message: advertising and trade journals and the sophistication of advertising | 64 |
| 4.3 The female consumer in advertising and trade journals | 68 |
| 4.4 Managing the female consumer | 78 |
| 4.5 Scientific selling: a psychological understanding of female consumer behaviour | 81 |
| 4.5.1 Advertising as a ‘psychological process’ | 83 |

| | |
|--|-----|
| 4.6 Department store advertising | 88 |
| 4.7 Visual enticement | 92 |
| 4.8 Service with a smile | 96 |
| 5. Shop 'Til You Drop: The Female Consumer in Advertising Strategies | |
| 5.1 Roeckl and Loden-Frey: background | 101 |
| 5.1.1 The female consumer | |
| Roeckl | |
| a) Luxury and decoration: the elegant consumer | 102 |
| b) The lady of leisure | 106 |
| Loden-Frey | |
| c) The outdoor woman | 113 |
| d) Home and family | 120 |
| 5.1.2 Sales strategies | |
| Roeckl | |
| a) Modern advertising: looking towards America | 124 |
| b) Gloves, appearance and status | 129 |
| c) "The most beautiful present": tempting the female consumer.. | 134 |
| Loden-Frey | |
| d) Full coverage: the Loden-Frey look | 138 |
| 5.2 Warenhaus Hermann Tietz and Kaufhaus Oberpollinger: background | 146 |
| 5.2.1 The department store as a consumer paradise | 148 |
| 5.2.2 The female consumer | |
| a) The frugal housewife: shopping as an exact science | 150 |
| b) Shopping for pleasure | 158 |
| 5.2.3 Sales strategies | |
| a) The bigger the better: department store advertisements | 174 |
| b) More for less: department store sales strategies | 176 |
| c) Bargain basement: shopping at the sales | 179 |
| d) In-house advertising | 187 |
| 6. At the Cash Register | |
| 6.1 Positive and negative representations of the female consumer | 207 |
| 6.2 Duty or delight? The dual meaning of shopping for the bourgeois female consumer | 213 |
| 6.3 The female consumer in the department store | 217 |
| 6.4 The female consumer in the small business | 219 |
| 6.5 Advertising, shopping and female agency | 221 |
| Bibliography | 225 |
| Catalogue of Images | 255 |
| Acknowledgements | 259 |